The military census of the town of Somerset is anxiously awaited.

Denmark is said to resent the entrance of the United States into the war. Is there something rotten in Denmark?

The nation wants to see Gunshoe Bill Stone of Missouri make good his promise to fight like a young eagle, once war was declared.

Every time the Germans sink a hospital ship they must forfeit the respect of every nation of the world, their own allies included.

"Gold-sated Yankees"—perhaps, as a German newspaper charges; but not bloody-fingered—bloody with the murder of innocent children and women.

Those who are disturbed by the anti-government activity on the part of some so-called Americans should bear in mind that no war has been fought by the United States government without some opposition at home.

We trust that the visit of the Vermont legislators to the Barre granite quarries on Thursday will give them some idea of the industrial development in their own state and, also, that the little excursion did not seriously disrupt the plans for final adjournment of the legislature.

Les Darcy, the Australian pugilist, was said to have come to the United States to avoid war. And he has run right against it, full tilt. Now that Darcy has taken out his first papers for American citizenship, the best thing he can do is to offer his services to the United States government, as Jess Willard has done.

Vermont editors, as one man, call attention to the fact that their state stands with Massachusetts in having appropriated $1,000,000 for war purposes. The prize is justifiable, and the company the best—Springfield (Mass.) Republican.

And now that you refer to comparison again, we confess surprise that the amount raised by Massachusetts was not larger. But perhaps $1,000,000 was only a starter for what Massachusetts intends to do. At any rate it served as a good example for the other states to follow. That much we concede, and it was done very promptly, too, after the possibility of war became strong. Vermont will not go very far wrong if she keeps company with the old Bay state.

LONG FIELD SERVICE EXPECTED.

The time of actual field service for the men of the Vermont National Guard, now mobilized at Fort Ethan Allen, is likely to be considerably longer than the actual service of the men who went to the Mexican border late last June. In all probability they will be under arms during the remainder of the great war, which already has run for two years and eight months, because the active participation of the United States in the war means that the entire military forces of the country will have to be kept under arms for the purpose of home protection even though it should not be found advisable to send any troops across the water to fight side by side with the British, the French, the Italians or the Russians. There seems at present no convincing indication of the collapse of either side in the warfare on any front in Europe, albeit there are evidences enough that the combined British and Russian forces are breaking down the resistance of the Turkish empire in Asia. Austria and Bulgaria, too, have given evidence of a disinclination to continue the fighting, but the military spirit of the German government has not been appreciably diminished despite the fact of extended

A TREATMENT FOR NERVES

Woman Tells How Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Helped Her.

West Danby, N. Y.—"I have had nervous trouble all my life until I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for nerves and for female troubles and it straightened me out in good shape. I work nearly all the time, as we live on a farm and I have four girls. I do all my sewing and other work with their help, so it shows that I stand it real well. I took the Compound when my ten year old daughter came and it helped me a lot. I keep it in the house all the time and recommend it."—Mrs. DEWITT SINCENATON, West Danby, N. Y.

Sleeplessness, nervousness, irritability, headache, dizziness, dragging sensations, all point to female derangements which may be overcome by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from choice roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

retreat on the western front of Europe and considerable internal pressure. It is certain that Germany will hold on with tenacity. On the other side Great Britain and France are equally steadfast; and if Russia and Italy stand by their guns there is no doubt that the entente allies will never give in. Therefore, it may reasonably be expected that the troops of the United States, including the Vermont National Guard, will be kept in actual service for a long time.

THE UNITED STATES IS FORMALLY AT WAR.

The formal declaration of war has been made. The United States is committed to one of the most momentous policies ever established by the country. It is well that the country did not go into the war in the white heat of passion, but rather after months, even years, of clear deliberation and after really serious efforts to remain neutral. In that time the government, as well as the people, has had the opportunity to commune with itself, so to speak, and to weigh the right and the wrong of the situation carefully. We are at war after no snap judgment. For that reason there should be the more sustained purpose to carry on our part of the war. Congress said the final word that snapped the thinly drawn cord of nominal friendship between the United States and Germany. Then the conduct of the nation's destiny was, in large part, taken out of the hands of Congress by virtue of the delegated powers in the constitution, and reposed in the president of the country. President Wilson is commander-in-chief of the army and the navy of the United States, as well as of the militia of the several states when those latter forces shall have been mustered into the federal service. To him the nation must look for guidance to a great extent. He will, of course, if wise, take unto himself the best counsel in warfare and in internal affairs that it is possible for him to get. He will also have a Congress that at the outset stands back of him almost to a man.

Therefore, let us not adopt a policy of capricious criticism. Let us rather be disposed to place confidence in our commander-in-chief, feeling assurance that a great many of the nation's plans have already been mapped out after careful deliberation. No doubt there will be errors of judgment. We believe so, at any rate, because Great Britain's path has been strewn with errors until now when that nation seems well established on the right course. Until some grievous mistake has been committed by our government it would be well for poorly informed citizens to refrain from fault-finding. It is reasonable to suppose that men who have been engaged in military and naval strategy for a long time are better fitted than we are to give advice. Until their incompetency has been proven beyond a doubt the nation should not meddle. We have plenty to do for the well-being of the nation without meddling. Let us all get behind the president and boost.

It might have been called Barre day in Washington county court yesterday as divorces were granted the following Barre people: May B. Young from Alton S. Young, for desertion; Ella H. Russell from Harry M. Russell, for intolerable severity; Estelle Foster from Robert Foster, for intolerable severity; Clarinda S. Hatch from William Hatch, for intolerable severity.

Already women of Barre are showing that the headquarters company of the National Guard has their patriotic spirit by preparing comfort kits for each of the volunteers enrolled. Specifications presented by the workers of that organization are being used in the present instance, thereby insuring uniformity in the kits turned out. Work of the kits was gotten under way last week by a circle of women who have since enlarged their sphere of endeavor by calling upon others to aid in hastening the completion of the gift to the company. It is hoped to have the comfort kits ready to ship to the front next week.

expressed satisfaction that her son should have responded to the call of country without urging or draft. The speaker said that officers of the company as well as the townspeople could pride themselves in that the company was recruited among young men who came voluntarily to headquarters and enlisted. He lauded the volunteers for their choice in being the first to volunteer for service in a war that may mean the enlistment of many men. Concluding, he called upon the crowd to give three cheers for Barre's first contribution to the war. The cheers were given and the square rang with the tiger that topped it off.

few of whom saw boys leaving to fight for the preservation of the Union in the '60s and more who remember the day that Company E departed in 1898, the scenes this morning were other scenes being re-enacted. In the last solemn moments before the train left many handkerchiefs were in evidence and tear-compelling emotions were not confined to those who had relatives and friends among the volunteers. The company moved rapidly toward the train, after the speaking, and at 8:40 o'clock the extra coaches provided for the Barre boys were rolling out of the yard. At the capital a wait of three hours was expected while a special train was being made up to carry companies from this section of Vermont to the front, and it was noon before the men were finally headed toward the reserve.

Barre's company, which is the headquarters unit of the regiment, including the infantry band, mounted orderlies staff, has been in existence only a few months. It will arrive at the front, however, with a full quota of men, in command of Capt. C. N. Barber, the regimental adjutant, to whose unsparing activities is due the fact that Barre is represented in the regiment by a full-fledged company. For the past few days the company has been quartered in the armory and bit by bit considerable of
